Guest Speakers

Jon "Maddog" Hall has been in the computer industry since 1969, using Unix since 1977, and Linux since 1994. Few speakers at technical conference can match the presence of 'maddog.' Jon has been the Executive Director of Linux International since 1995, and his resume includes Department Head of Computer Science at Hartford State Technical College, and employment at VA Linux systems, Compaq Computer Corporation, Bell Laboratories among other companies.  http://www.li.org

Michael P. Eubanks is a Special Agent with the Mobile FBI.  He spends much of his time detecting and arresting cyber terrorists from around the world.  He uses Linux as a tool to help catch these evildoers.
Gerald (Jerry) Carter received his Masters degree in Computer Science from Auburn University, where he continues to pursue his PhD. He has been a member of the SAMBA Development Team since 1998, and in 1995 he became involved with UNIX systems and network administration. Jerry currently works at HP's embedded printing appliances division. He has published articles with various web-based magazines and teaches instructional courses as a consultant for several companies and conferences. Jerry has also written books for SAMS Publishing.  http://www.plainjoe.org/

Adam Gautier is currently CTO of Upstream Enterprises delivering turn-key business solutions based on upstream open source software across a myriad of industries. Adam has served as Technical Director for Intuitive Search and Chief Software Architect for Canopy International, an NEC Company. He has also delivered technology solutions including satellite communication and navigation systems, GIS systems, embedded solutions, enterprise solutions, banking systems, and 5-nines computing systems. His clients include Abbott Labs, Open Applications Group, Phelps Dodge, Ford, and SouthTrust Bank.
